

19:32:26 I'm currently reading Americanah by Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie.

19:33:15 I'll bite! I'm currently reading Children of Blood & Bone.

19:33:46 I loved reading The Poet X by Elizabeth Acevedo, and I'm excited to read it with my incoming 9th grader

19:36:31 Hello! Lamar Giles, a co-founder of We Need Diverse Books, has been my guest on my WCTV show Book Stew four times. He writes YA and middle grade books. Please check him out!

19:40:22 Highly recommend Grace Lin's blog post on Dr. Seuss, addressing his racism and growth and her acceptance of the Theodore Geisel honor. <http://www.gracelinblog.com/2017/10/ok-lets-talk-about-dr-seuss.html>

19:45:04 New kid is one of my favorites!

19:47:52 Two thumbs up for New Kid! Great book.

19:49:04 The audiobook of Stamped is so amazing!

19:52:03 I have been trying to introduce the idea of racism to my 5 yo but it seems so foreign to him because he does not yet have the context in his every day life for racism. Should I just start reading more diverse books to him or should I continue to talk to him directly about racism, or both?

19:54:14 I think my family does a really good job of incorporating diverse books into our home library. My husband and I also watch a wide array of tv and movies. Are there any TV shows or movies for children that you would recommend that centers a multi-culture lens? (my kids are 5 and 6 years old)

19:55:23 When consuming media, particularly books that feature BIPOC, I choose books that are written by BIPOC (such as So You Want To Talk About Race and Stamped).

19:57:54 Even going through your child's bookshelf with your child might be beneficial

19:59:11 Highly recommend Grace Lin's blog post on Dr. Seuss, addressing his racism and growth and her acceptance of the Theodore Geisel honor. <http://www.gracelinblog.com/2017/10/ok-lets-talk-about-dr-seuss.html>

19:59:39 Two thumbs up for New Kid! Great book.

20:10:03 I have to leave the meeting now. Thank you for hosting this event and engaging in this dialogue.
